Announcement of the Meeting Minutes for the Student Information Session on the Suspension of Admissions

Graduate Program in Biomedical Informatics

After considering recent admission trends, future academic directions, and the allocation of teaching and research resources based on the overall development plan of Yuan Ze University (YZU), the Graduate Program in Biomedical Informatics (GPBI) has proceeded with the application for suspension of admissions in accordance with YZU's internal procedures and the regulations of the Ministry of Education.

To protect the educational rights and interests of current GPBI students and to explain the background, procedures, and supporting measures, the "Student Information Session on the Suspension of Admissions for the Graduate Program in Biomedical Informatics" was held on Wednesday, June 17, 2026.

The meeting minutes are hereby announced on the GPBI website for the reference of students, faculty members, and relevant personnel.

After the suspension of admissions takes effect, current GPBI students may continue and complete their studies in accordance with the academic regulations applicable to their year of admission. Course arrangements, thesis advising, research resources, and administrative support will continue to be provided until students complete their degree requirements.
